Welcome to the new HomeworkNYC website www.homeworknyc.org

HomeworkNYC.org is now the place for parents, teachers, and librarians to find out how to help students successfully complete their homework using contemporary technology tools.

When asked during research implemented by New York City libraries (Brooklyn Public Library, The New York Public Library, and Queens Library), ‘tweens and teens told us they would be more likely to use homework tools created by libraries if those tools were easily accessible from the online spaces they already inhabit, so...

HomeworkNYC now provides:
- Web 2.0 tools to help students with learning
- Information on social networking
- Apps that provide homework help and connection with the NYC public libraries

HomeworkNYC staff know that the adults in a teen’s life—parents, teachers, librarians, and others—are not necessarily familiar with the ways in which current technology can be integrated into homework. That’s what the new HomeworkNYC website is all about. It’s for you to learn more about technology and social media, so you can help young adults succeed.

HomeworkNYC Apps is a joint project of Brooklyn Public Library, The New York Public Library, and Queens Library with the assistance of the New York City Department of Education. The HomeworkNYC Apps project is made possible by a grant from the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services.
